Privacy Policy

Last updated: 19 October 2026. PostCora is operated by Shan Ali. This policy explains what PostCora stores and why.

What we store

- Your account: name, username, email, a salted hash of your PostCora password (never the password itself), two-factor settings (authenticator secrets are encrypted; recovery codes are stored only as hashes), and security-key public keys.
- Sign-in and security: active sessions with a short browser/device description and an approximate country/city from Cloudflare, a first-party cookie that recognises your browser for new-device alerts, and a security log of sign-ins and account changes.
- Facebook: your name and ID, the Pages you approve, Page access tokens (encrypted with AES-256-GCM), Page statistics and post history.
- Google: for Google sign-in, your Google account ID, email, name and photo. PostCora does not ask for access to your own Google Drive.
- Your files: videos and photos you upload, with their names, sizes and captions. They are stored in Google Drive accounts operated by PostCora (not in your own Google account), in a private folder for your PostCora account that other customers cannot access. The access tokens for those storage accounts are encrypted and stay on PostCora's servers.
- Scheduling and tokens: your videos' names and captions, scheduled and published posts, and your token ledger.

How it is used

Only to run PostCora for you: sign-in and account security, uploading, scheduling and publishing what you choose, showing statistics, billing tokens and sending account emails. Your data is not sold or used for advertising.

Data deletion

You can ask us to delete the data PostCora holds about you:

- Optional but recommended: remove PostCora in Facebook → Settings & privacy → Settings → Business integrations → PostCora → Remove, and in your Google Account → Security → Third-party access. This revokes access immediately.
- Email support@postcora.com from your account email with the subject "PostCora data deletion" (or message us on WhatsApp +92 318 3840372). We delete your account record, Facebook and Google connection data, statistics cache and scheduling history and confirm by email.

PostCora never touches anything in your own Google account. Removing PostCora in Facebook also notifies us automatically through Facebook's data deletion callback.
